RDF projects are aimed to improve social equality by strengthening the role of local communities in accessing natural resource management, to improve the livelihood of rural people by providing innovative ideas and approaches with their adoption to local conditions and taking into account local experience.

One of the significant areas of the RDF is the revitalization, collection, safeguarding and popularization of the Kyrgyz traditional pastoral and ecological knowledge related to pastoral lifestyle as: pastoral livestock keeping, pasture management and rational use, pastoral rites and rituals, games and songs, nomad cuisine, knowledge about herbs for traditional medicine, ecological knowledge about nature, resources, wildlife, forests and pastures - knowledge which is transmitted from generation to generation in the form of tales, epics, songs, legends, stories. RDF is a pioneer in introducing the ideas about the importance of traditional pastoral and ecological knowledge in safeguarding the rangeland and forest ecosystems in Kyrgyzstan, in rational use of natural resources, and in promoting community-based natural resources management.

- establishment of the network of custodians and the database of traditional pastoral knowledge,
- popularization and transmission of traditional pastoral and ecological knowledge among the youth by organizing different activities and festivals,

RDF recognizes that the safeguarding of the cultural heritage related to pastoral lifestyle and ecological consciousness will lead to finding a way to overcome global challenges, to prevent degradation of ecosystems and contribute to the sustainable development of the local communities.

During the period of 2006-2018, RDF has implemented a number of initiatives and various activities in safeguarding the intangible cultural heritage such as the revitalization of traditional pastoral and ecological knowledge and traditional practices related to pastoral lifestyle, safeguarding the natural ecosystems using traditional ecological knowledge, management of the biocultural diversity, wildlife and genetic resources using traditional knowledge, rites and beliefs. For example, in the period of 2006-2012, RDF has implemented activities and achieved the following main outcomes:

- inventory of the traditional pastoral knowledge of pastoral practices, traditional animal husbandry, rituals and rites related to the rational use of natural resources;

- a database of the Kyrgyz custodians of traditional knowledge on pastoral livestock practices and skills;

- inventory of traditional ecological knowledge, practices, traditional rituals and rites related to sustainable use and management of natural resources, as well as safeguarding the natural ecosystems and communities;

- an informal network of pastoralists, which was strengthened and became an officially registered public association "Kyrgyz El Akyl Kazyna" Kyrgyz Pastoralists' Network (Treasury of the Kyrgyz people's knowledge);

- number of public activities and events— Pastoral Fairs and Festivals of Traditional Knowledge, Summer Pastoral Schools;

- training materials and information on Traditional Knowledge distributed to farmers through existing extension agencies. Methodological training materials and brochures were used by many other farmers around the country;

The research was conducted in all regions of Kyrgyzstan, including the places where ethnic Kyrgyz lived in Turkey and China.

Between 2010-2014, RDF launched a new direction in the field of traditional knowledge, focused on promoting the community joint forest management in Kyrgyzstan, management of bio-cultural diversity and collection of the Traditional Ecological Knowledge. The main purpose of the project was to develop a Joint Forest Management Model based on Traditional Ecological Knowledge. RDF together with communities conducted a research on traditional ecological knowledge focused on local knowledge of the Kyrgyz people on the use of forest resources (planting trees, collecting forest products), traditional beliefs, customs, and stories of a community about the nature and natural resources, transmitted from generations, rational and sustainable use of natural resources, and the best practices of hunting, grazing, building etc.

A relatively recent (2015) new line of work is devoted to traditional ecological knowledge to safeguard the snow leopard and its habitat at the community level, which is aimed at increasing the snow leopard population in Kyrgyzstan, improving their habitat through the revival of traditional knowledge and raising public awareness of these rare species.

In 2017-2018, RDF implemented a very interesting project aimed at introducing Access and Equitable Sharing of Benefits (ABS) in the country, strengthening the capacity of local communities to safeguard biological and cultural resources, raising awareness of access and sharing benefits from the use of genetic resources and traditional knowledge. Pastoral Network "KEAK" participated in field research to collect data on genetic resources and was supported by a micro-grants program related in safeguarding and rational use of genetic resources.

Each RDF project aims to involve local communities and local groups as partners, rather than pure beneficiaries in research and activities related to the collection and safeguarding the traditional knowledge and cultural heritage. It is very important that the cultural heritage is being collected and transmitted among local people and the new generations based on the "bottom-up" approach. The projects include various activities with the participation of local communities and some of them are:

- Communities are involved in research, discussions, collection, reflection of the traditional knowledge through different approaches: Participatory Rural Appraisals, case studies, reflection meetings, fairs of traditional knowledge involving local and foreign pastoralists.
- Summer pastoral schools named "Pastoralist-to-Pastoralist" have become one of the most important and significant components. Summer pastoral schools were organized for students, teachers, and pastoralist who practice traditional pastoral and ecological knowledge. The main purpose of these schools was to disseminate traditional knowledge and practices among youth and to provide theoretical and practical knowledge on traditional use of pastures, traditional life and culture of nomadic Kyrgyz people: rites and customs, types of yurts, a nomadic cuisine, games at pastures, as well as traditional methods of animal treatment.
- Fairs of Traditional Knowledge are organized to present and discuss the findings of the research on traditional knowledge and pastoral practices. Most of the fair participants were livestock farmers, custodians, and practitioners of traditional knowledge from the northern region of the country. The event was also attended by guests from different regions who came to share experiences and discuss the secrets of traditional knowledge in the field of livestock farming, nomadic culture, and household activities.
- The traditional knowledge projects participants were mobilized and, under the support of RDF, established the Kyrgyz El Akyl Kazyna Pastoral Network that aimed to integrate, summarize, and collect all accumulated traditional knowledge. The network exists for more than 5 years and became a strong and sustainable association of custodians and practitioners, conducting activities not only within RDF projects, but also independently. The network has members from all region of Kyrgyzstan.
